"Cloning yields several individuals that have the same DNA, but their personalities can vary significantly, due to different social environments.

As I clone my pieces, I bestow on them different personalities, and send them to opposite paths.

The first lies in the essence of shape, FORM and contour. Purity of porcelain, enhanced by a semi-matte white glaze, eliminates any distraction from colours. The only shade being considered is that produced by the object itself: Achromatic shades of light, and its absence. The contour reveals itself by the presence and absence of material, both of equal importance.

An opposite path gives away the control of colour and texture to the elements of nature: Wind, Earth and FIRE. The unpredictable outcome of a Tozan Wood-firing is the key".
